

MORE ABOUT COREY

Corey J. Reese is a professional speaker and transition specialist focused on college and career readiness. He is preparing students to successfully transition from school to adult life.

When Corey was in grade school, detention, suspension, and even expulsion was common occurrence for him. Corey was diagnosed with ADHD and faced many other obstacles that sent him into, what he calls, an identity crisis.

Through a journey of mentorship and self-development Corey identified his unique gift as a communicator. Recognizing his skill helped him transition from problem student to community influencer.

Corey rose above his challenges and had a measurable impact on his school and local community. Corey's youthful impact even went global when he organized support for African families suffering from AIDS and HIV.

Today, Corey shares his personal story and professional experiences so your students can identify, grow, and communicate their unique value.

Unfortunately, this is usually not a part of traditional school curriculum, but is vital to every student's growth and development.

Corey's mission is to prepare students for success in the classroom and beyond in a relatable and entertaining way.
